Step 1: Have Software 1.1.. Add hardware keygen in it.. Then install a keygen builder utility, remove any hardware key 1.2.. Afterwards open the keygen, select a suitable key and set it in the software.. it's free, and it is not need to buy it. 1.3.. But if you need to fix a problem, you can buy this product,. what's more, you can download it from the keygen builder.. Try it and you will never regret. 1.4.. Although you do not need to buy it, but it is still.. because you will be lost without it. If you are a newbie, you will not. What do you mean by "Doesn't work"? Can you provide a detailed description of what happens? Could you also provide the error codes? If you say, "It just doesn't work", you are obviously not having any troubles what so ever. We can't do anything about that. Your next step is to make sure you have a good understanding of what Your hardware is, where it's located (internal or external), and what it's specifications are. For example: model name, model number, specifications number/name (such as 250HD or UD-M250HD), version number (say 3.0.0.18 for example), and if it's an internal card, which slot it's placed in. It is vital that you understand the various different types of cards in your computer and where they are located. Where Do I get help A: What you are describing is almost certainly a problem with your firmware. Basically the firmware in the motherboard is what interacts with the operating system and the software that you installed (including the OS itself, any drivers etc.) when you turn your computer on. When you say "it doesn't work" what you are essentially saying is: "The firmware on my motherboard is causing a problem, but I do not know what the problem is" It is possible to debug the firmware directly. This is actually extremely easy on a PC, and almost the same on a Mac, the steps for each are as follows: Insert a Windows 8, Windows 7 or Windows 10 install CD. Boot from CD. When asked to choose a language, choose English (United States), it should say so in the upper left corner
