What's New In?

In today's world, where everything is accessible online through the World Wide Web, just about every individual needs a dedicated domain name. In order to have an Internet presence, you need to create a webpage. Today, owning a domain name is more or less an easy process. There are a lot of domain registrars around the web which are quick and easy to use. However, the problem comes when deciding on the right one, because not all of them will give you the services you might need. To avoid this problem, this article will help you out by giving you the information you need to make a smart decision on whether you should register your domain for free or pay for it. Need Domain Name? Now that you know what a domain name is, you might think it sounds like an easy thing to obtain. There are of course many different domain registrars on the market. Today, it seems like every business is expected to offer a website to the public. Unless you want to be labeled as a small fish in a big pond, you better head over to a company that offers website services. Do keep in mind that you cannot simply pick up a domain name and register it to your website for free. You have to pay a registration fee, and of course, once the registration is completed, there are other things you will have to pay for. For example, you will need to pay for hosting and domain security. However, there is still a fee involved. Besides these, you will have to pay a renewal fee every year. The good news is that there are domains that can be registered for free for one year. After that, you will have to pay the yearly fee to keep your domain registration alive. A lot of hosting companies will offer this so you don't have to worry about the renewal fee. The other good news is that you can still register your domain name for as low as $10 and $6 a year, which means you can start building your online presence right now with as little as a $20 investment. Why Choose a Registered Domain Name Over a Free Domain Name? A lot of businesses choose the latter so that they can give away their domain name. This is of course very smart from a marketing perspective, but can often hurt the company in the long run. You see, when you register for a free domain name, it will automatically redirect to the company's website
